Trip Overview

Kanchenjunga base camp Trek is a remote mountain trail ideal for trekkers who enjoy solitude. It is also an opportunity to reach the base camp of the world's third-tallest mountain. Located in the far north-eastern corner of Nepal, Mt. Kanchenjunga is considered to be one of the most beautiful mountain massifs, scaling 8,586m. Kanchenjunga Park itself is a wilderness virtually untouched by time and tourism, perfect for the adventurous trekker looking for something unique. The trek heads through diverse land topography, forests, and villages. You'll see central, south, and north Kanchenjunga, as well as Yalung Kang, Mt. Jannu, Makalu, Lhotse, and Mt. Everest, on the way to Selela Pass. Keep your eyes open, and you might see snow leopards, mask deer, and several species of birds, along with the country's most pristine oak and rhododendron forests. After trekking through the forested area, the trail winds into higher and harsher terrain. Cross the Mirgin-La pass at 4725 meters and enjoy the views of Makalu, Chamlang, and Everest. Next, you will pass the glacier, and finally, you will be rewarded with an incredible, close-up view of Kanchenjunga Peak as you approach the Kanchenjunga base camp at Pang Pema.
